WOMAN IN CAB TRAGEDY IN TOMBS

Policeman Junior turned over to the Coroner a postal card which he said was evidently flanded to her by the following was written on it: "Mrs. Patterson, care of Mrs. Smith, St. Paul Hotel, Sixtleth street and Columbus avenue." On the other side was a picture of the old Tappan Tavern, at Sheepshead Bay. Mrs. Young's laware, the intention of Young to kill the woman as well as himself, and that he intention of Young to kill the woman as well as himself, and that he would be no trouble in established.

Policeman Junior, who was one of the men who heard the shot and second the cab, made this statement to the Coroner:

Woodruff profited by four wide ones. Mertes made a pretty catch on Pelta's long drive. Harper dumped one before the following was written on it: "Mrs. Patterson, care of Mrs. Smith, St. LYING ACROSS HIS LAP.

LYING ACROSS HIS LAP.

"When I stepped to the platform of the cab I only saw the woman inside. Looking again I saw the man lying across the woman's lap. I had not see any pistol. The pistol was not in his hand. Later I found it in his right-hand sack coa

Dr. J. J. White, who was present at Coroner Physician O'Hanlon's autopsy on Young's body at the Hudson Street Hospital, issued the foilowing statement:

"The built entered the left apex of the lung just below the left cavicle. It took a downward course toward the spine and is now imbedded board the steamer. in the spine. It did not touch the heart at all. The deceased was a righthanded man, and in my opinion the wound could not have been selfinflicted."

John D. Mellen, Young's business partner, made two desperate attempts to reach the woman, intending her harm and accusing her of murdering

Mrs. Young went with the trunks of herself and her husband to the White Star line pier early this morning, her husband saying he would meet her there before the Germanic sailed. Young, with Mrs. Patterson, hired Fred Michaels's hansom cab at the

Columbus Circle, Fifty-ninth street and Eighth avenue, and told Michaels to drive them to the Fulton street ferry. Their presence at the Columbus Circle is accounted for by the police through the fact that Mrs. Patterson lives at the St. Paul Hotel, Columbus avenue and Sixtieth street. BADE THE WOMAN FAREWELL.

Michaels said that nothing of importance occurred on the way downtown, but that at Franklin street and West Broadway, where he was compelled to pull up and let a string of teams pass, he heard Young say to his companion in the cab:

"Well, Nan, I've got to go away for two or three months. I may not see you again. In fact, I don't think I will ever see you again. It's better that I should not."

In the next instant the cabman says he heard a pistol shot, and knew that either the man or the woman had been shot.

As he leaped down from his seat Detective-Sergeant E. J. Quinn, who was standing on the corner and heard the shot, rushed over to the cab. So far as the police have been able to learn no one saw the shooting. Young's body was lying across the woman's lap and she was white with

A peculiar fact came to light when the man's body was taken from the cab. The revolver with which he had been shot was found in his coat pocket. When the body of the bookmaker was searched the police found $1,820 in cash and enough diamond jewelry to stock a jewelry store. His wife Wells got first on Smith's must of a dot liner, but was out in an attempt to had the tickets for Europe. Two staterpoms had already been engaged of the leaf second. Davis out, Metcaif to lownan. Stevens filed to Smith. NO had the tickets for Europe. Two staterooms had already been engaged on

Mrs. Young and a number of friends, including John D. Mellen, her husband's partner, and William Luce, of Harlem, were on the White Star line pier when news of the shooting was taken them by reporters. Mrs. Young did not hear the news, and she was induced to return to the Metel Walcott, when the facts were told her by her friends. She is prostrated.

Mellen rushed from the pier over to the Leonard street station, where the woman was first taken, and as he broke into the room he swore at the

"You killed Young! You know you did. He knew you would kill him ooner or later."

He tried to get ay the woman with his clinched fists, but was restrained by the police. Mrs. Patterson was then taken to the Coroner's Officewhere Coroner Brown took her statement. While she was making her statement Mellen reached the office and broke through the door. He came near striking her in the face with his fist, and as the police checked rum he shouted at her: "If I had a gun I'd kill you where you stand." He was taken to another room, where later he made a statement to the Coroner.

In her statement to the Coroner Mrs. Patterson said: "My sister, Mrs. Morgan Smith, with whom I live in the St. Paul, received a telephone message from Young at 7.30 o'clock this morning. Mr. Smith has wealthy relatives. Young told my sister to have me meet him at the Columbus Circle at 8 o'clock.

"My sister awakened me and I hurriedly dressed, and got over to the Circle at 8.05. Young was waiting for me. We went into a saloon together and he had a drink of whiskey. We then took the cab and drove downtown. He told me he was going to meet his wife at the Fulton ferry, and I was to get out of the cab a few blocks before we reached the ferry.

"We first drove to a Fifth avenue hat store, where he purchased a new hat. Then we continued down in the cab, and at Bleecker street and West Broadway we got out at another saloon and he had another drink of

"Then we continued on downtown. While we were waiting for the cams to pass at Franklin street he was telling me he was sorry, but he did not think that after to-day he would be able to ever see me again. We were talking when I heard a pistol shot. It was muffled, and as I turned he fell had at last won a game and the sun beat

"He must have shot himself while his revolver was in his pocket. first met Young three years ago on the way to California. I met him frequently since then and was intimate with him. We came on from Chicago together five weeks ago. I loved him dearly and he told me he loved me. I believe he killed himself because he was made despondent through his love for me.

"How do you know it was a pistol?" the Coroner inquired.

"I put my hand in his pocket and pulled the pistol out and put it back again." was her reply.

"Was this after the shooting" "Yes."

Attorney Walheimer, representing her, then became much excited and the west bank of the river, about half said it was merely the statement of a hysterical woman.

Coroner Brown held her in default of $1,000 bonds as a witness. She was unable to furnish the bail herself, but said that Charles Patterson, cashier of the Fourth National Bank, was her uncle. When it was suggested that he would supply bail she would not listen to it and called up

When Mr. Smith reached the Criminal Courts he was greatly excited. After the woman had fallen in his arms in a swoon and had been revived he said he would get the necessary bonds for her. She was taken to the John D. Mellen, the business partner of Young, was then questioned. He said that he was certain the revolver found in Young's pocket did not belong to him.

"I have been Young's most intimate friend for twenty years. I know him as well as I know myself, and I am positive that he never had a revolver in his life. He often told me he would never carry a revolver. He was afraid of them. I have seen him go out alone at night in dangerous places with as much as $20,000 in cash in his pockets and never a weapon about him.

SUICIDE IN HER PRESENCE.

"I knew this woman in California. She was in love with an actor in a 'Ben Hur' company when she was with the 'Florodora' company. He became insane over her and committed suicide in her presence.

"Another lover of hers on the coast killed himslf. All of Young's frinds had been trying to get him to give up this woman. He would go away and she would follow him. Young told me that the would go away and she would follow him. Young told me that the would go are the first by O'Leary. Gangel hit for three bases to right this time. McGruws. humor and we finished our business affairs so that I could have charge of SCORE TIED IN things while he was gone. We found that we owned forty race horses and two big stock farms in California. One of Young's last words to me last night was:

'Well, Jack, I can now cash in for anywhere from a quarter to a half million dollars. I don't know just how much I'm worth, but I have enough to live mighty comfortably without worrying."

"He said he was going to Europe to get away from Nan Patterson, and that his object in going to Europe was that she could hardly follow her pocket after he shot himself."

Young and his wife have been living at Sheepshead Bay, where he has made a book on the races. They came to New York last night and stopped at the home of William Luce, No. 227 West One Hundred and Fortieth street, a friend of the family, so that they could be up early this morning to Young left the house at 7 o'clock this morning, telling his wife he was going to get shaved. She told him that as she was going to leave the house at once she would meet him at the pier. That was the last she saw of him.

LANGAN PUTS MEN ON CASE. Capt. Langan, in charge of Detective Headquarters, detailed several sleuths on the case.

"I have been informed," said Capt. Langan, "that some most valuable letters have been found in the dead man's pocket which will go far towards proving that he did not commit suicide. I have not secured these letters yet, but they will be turned over to me."
